

Peirspictiochtai Ar An Saol

Anniversary Of The Start Of World War III
April 18, 1983
Photograph Essay

American Marines and other members of the Multinational Force in Lebanon assessed the damages caused by a terrorist bomb attack on the Embassy of the United States of America in Beirut, Lebanon.

(The photograph was produced by the United States military and provided courtesy of The United States National Archives and Records Administration, April 29, 1983.)

American Marines outside the Embassy of the United States of America assessed the damage caused by a terrorist bomb attack in Beirut, Lebanon. The American Marines were participating as members of the Multinational Force in Lebanon.

(The photograph was produced by the United States military and provided courtesy of The United States National Archives and Records Administration, April 29, 1983.)

A view of damage to the Embassy of the United States of America caused by a terrorist bomb attack in Beirut, Lebanon.

(The photograph was produced by the United States military and provided courtesy of The United States National Archives and Records Administration, April 29, 1983.)

President Ronald Reagan and First Lady Nancy Reagan, at Andrews Air Force Base (now known as “Joint Base Andrews”) in Maryland, reviewing flag-draped coffins of some of those killed in the bombing of the Embassy of the United States of America in Beirut, Lebanon, on April 18, 1983.

(This photograph was produced by The White House and provided courtesy of The United States National Archives and Records Administration, April 23, 1983.)

Peirspictiochtaí Ar A Saol – Gaelic – Irish – for “Perspectives On Life” is a column focused on aspects of accountability and responsibility as well as ways people look at life.

Contact Richard McDonough at PeirspictiochtaíArAnSaol@protonmail.com.

© 2026 Richard McDonough